The lowest trees have tops

John Dowland

#19 from The Third and Last Book of Ayres sing, and yet they love, True hearts have eyes and though they be not great. Seas have their source, and ears, no tongues to speak: They hear and see, and so have shallow springs, And love is love in ears, no tongues to speak: tongues to speak: They hear and so have shallow springs, shallow springs, And love is love

and so have shallow springs, shallow springs, And love is love ears, no tongues to speak, tongues to speak: They hear and see, beg-gars and in kings.

sigh, and then they break.

love in beg-gars and in kings.

see, and sigh, and then they break.
