Johann Knöfel (ca. 1530-ca. 1617) served in various Lutheran courts and was apparently a Protestant himself. But he believed that Gregorian chant should be preserved in the Lutheran liturgy. His Cantus Choralis (Nuremberg: Theodor Gerlach, 1575) contains Propers for major feasts (Advent 4, Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost, Trinity). Each set contains the Introit, Alleluia, and Sequence, troped Mass movements, and sometimes other items (for instance, Salve Festa Dies for Easter).

The Tridentine Missal was published in 1570. It's likely that much of this music was written before then. Knöfel may not have seen the Missal of Paul V, and it was irrelevant to Lutheran practice anyway. But it's relevant to the use of this Sequence, as it contains the verse "Credendum est...Judeorum fallaci", which was removed from the liturgy at that time. I have included the complete text for concert use, but there is a cut which is obligatory for liturgical use: after "Galileam", jump to m. 81, beat 4, and begin each voice with "Scimus", not singing the overlapping ends of the previous section. Also, the text omits the "Amen" before the Alleluia. I have supplied it in italics beneath the main text, for those concerned with liturgical niceties. All text spellings have been regularized to match the text in the Liber Usualis.

This is an alternatim setting. The missing text has been supplied from the Liber Usualis, as this is an edition for use in the liturgy and that is what people will be familiar with (also, because I'm lazy!). A musicological performance should use the Graduale Pavatiense or similar source. The chant has been transposed to match the transposed mode of the polyphony, and the bits of chant that float throughout the texture. The work is written in high clefs (G2, C2, C3, C3, F3), and the tessitura of the soprano and tenor parts, and the chant, suggest a downward transposition of a third or fourth. This edition is transposed down a minor third.

Text underlay is very clear in this print. All accidentals are explicit (with one exception, written above the note), but their cancellation is editorial. There is one exception: m. 37, soprano. Here the print contains a clear sharp on the F (D) and a natural on B (G#), which makes perfect linear sense. But then Tenor 1 needs to come in on a B flat beneath that, and the alto follows with another B flat. The result is not a charming cross-relation, but a train wreck. I have opted to remove the B natural but retain the F sharp, as least disruptive to the flow. If the diminished fourth is too difficult, the sharp on the F may also be removed. I suspect they were an error added to the partbook without reference to the other parts.

Sequence, Easter Sunday

Johann Knöfel
Cantus Choralis
Nuremberg, 1575
ed. by Jeffrey Quick

Musical score for the first section of Victimae paschali laudes. The score consists of five staves: Soprano, Alto, Tenor 1, Tenor 2, and Bass. The key signature is C major with one sharp (F#). The time signature is common time (indicated by 'C'). The vocal parts sing the text "Vi - cti - mae pas - cha - li lau - des" in a repeating pattern. The bass part remains silent throughout this section.

Musical score for the second section of Victimae paschali laudes. The score consists of six staves: Soprano (S), Alto (A), Tenor 1 (T1), Tenor 2 (T2), Bass (B), and another Bass staff. The key signature changes to G major with one sharp (G#). The time signature is common time (indicated by 'C'). The vocal parts sing the text "im - mo - lent, im - cha - li lau - des im - mo - mae pas - cha - li lau - des im - mo - lent, im - cha - li lau - des im - mo - mae pas - cha - li lau - des im - mo - lent". The bass staff continues the bass line from the previous section.
