G Major
Charles A. Tindley, 1909

1. It may be a brother with whom I did play, Ere the death angel had call'd him a - way,
2. It may be a sister, the charm of our home, Whom in bright springtime thro' meadows we roam'd,
3. It may be a father whom I love so dear, Whose kindest provisions re - liev'd me of care,
4. It may be a mother who rocked me to sleep, Like fretful infants I sometimes would weep,

10. Somewhere in glo-ry so happy and free, Watching and waiting this moment for me.
2. Tho' now up in heav'n bright mansions to see, Watching and waiting this moment for me.
3. Somewhere with angels beyond death's cold sea, Watching and waiting this moment for me.
4. Now she's in heaven from tri - als all free, I know she's watching this moment for me.
